

I use the XM instant traffic and weather religiously. It is much more detailed than the typical am or fm broadcast and allows me to plan my substantial daily local travel for not only the commuting periods but also throughout the day. It is a travesty that the NAB is attempting to prohibit XM from providing a service that is in the consumers' best interests, particularly when their constituent radio stations simply either cannot deliver or choose not to deliver to the same level of detail and quality.

It also provides a significant advantage to me when I travel to other cities that are covered by the XM service and allows me to save valuable time as I move to or through these metropolitan areas.
